An illustrated lecture titled, 'The Great Fort of Aghagallon, its location and extent: How old is it and how diverse is its history?' to be given by Dr. Cormac McSparron, School of Archaeology, Queen's University.

In the summer of 2017, Cormac McSparron and his team began a focused dig on land near the rear of St Patrick's Church, Aghagallon. His findings provide a clear insight into an historic site embracing the adjoining cemetery and a site which has always been regarded a special landscape. Archaeology is such a crucial and revealing part of local and regional history.
